

What is a Liaison ?

A Special Education Liaison (SEL) is a parent volunteer who has a child with an IEP.

The Liaison works closely with the PTA and school staff to enhance the quality of instruction for students receiving special education and related services. This valuable position models the importance of advocacy and the positive impact it has to the school and community. The SEL must be a PTA member in good standing.

What does a Special Education Liaison Do?

- u Promotes parent participation in IEP team meetings. This may be done through newsletter articles, information sheets, special meetings or personal contact.
- u Distributes information to your school community through your local PTA newsletter.
- u Refers parents to the Resource Center for support and information.

Since 1994, The Special Education Liaison Project has been a cooperative effort between parent volunteers, PTA and school administrators. One of the goals of the project is continuing to ensure that children with "Individualized Education Programs" are represented. The partnership is an effective way to promote positive communication in the school and community.
